

Join our free COVID-19 webinar:

Justice Adapting - The Law Societies:
Northwest Territories, Nunavut, and Yukon

Tuesday, May 26, 2020 at
11 a.m. PT | 12 p.m. MT | 2 p.m. ET

As COVID-19 events continue to unfold and have an impact on how law is practiced, LexisNexis is committed to providing pertinent information and resources to the Canadian legal industry, such as our Justice Adapting webinar series. The information discussed during these live virtual events is timely and relevant to your daily practice and jurisdiction.

Join LexisNexis Canada as we host: Justice Adapting – The Law Societies: Nunavut, Northwest Territories, Yukon

Physical distancing and working remotely may be limiting your access to the legal resources that you have come to rely on to successfully operate your firm, and to serve your clients effectively. As the pace of change and complexity of the legal environment increases, the need to develop, maintain and adapt to new professional standards is crucial.

During this webinar a panel of senior leaders from the Law Society of Northwest Territories, Law Society of Nunavut, and Law Society of Yukon will discuss a broad range of activities, initiatives and policies that lawyers should consider to ensure professional standards and regulatory requirements are met. Steps to ensure the governance of continuing professional development, various practice arrangements, and their relationship with colleagues and employees will also be discussed.

Panelists:

John MacLean
President
Law Society of Nunavut

Glen Tait
Executive Director & Deputy Secretary
Law Society of Northwest Territories

Mark Wallace
President
Law Society of Yukon

REGISTER NOW

SUBMIT A QUESTION

Webinar Details:

Justice Adapting – The Law Societies: Northwest Territories, Nunavut, Yukon

Tuesday, May 26, 2020 at 11 a.m. PT | 12 p.m. MT | 2 p.m. ET

No cost, registration is required

