

e) Renewal of a Restricted Appearance Certificate

The Law Society requires at least 10 working days in order to process the forms. The applicant shall submit all the forms early enough so that there is no interruption in the applicant's ability to appear in front of the Nunavut Court of Justice.

If the applicant informs the Law Society in writing that he/she will renew the RAC at least 10 days before the expiration date, the applicant shall have 90 days to submit all the completed forms and payment.

If the RAC expires before the applicant applies for a renewal, he/she will be required to resubmit a full RAC application. Unless extended by the Secretary, the RAC still expires on the expiry date.

f) Restricted Appearance Certificate

Each time a Restricted Appearance Certificate is approved by the Law Society, the certificate will be scanned to the Nunavut Court of Justice and Court Library. The original will be sent to the member.

The following information will appear on the Restricted Appearance Certificate:

- Name of the applicant, city and province/territory
- Date
- Number of the court file or/and name of the matter
- Expiry date
- RAC number
- Signature of the Secretary or Deputy-Secretary
- Seal of the Law Society
- Overleaf: Terms & Conditions

g) Lawyers from Quebec (Members of the Barreau du Québec)

Lawyers applying for a Restricted Appearance Certificate should be aware that they could be restricted to practising law in the following areas:

- a) the law of Quebec;
- b) matters under federal jurisdiction; and
- c) matters involving public international law
